

More than 12 months since a professional clean

Use this page when the unit has simply gone too long without a proper service and needs a practical reminder rather than a full service.

What this usually means

If it has been more than 12 months since a professional clean, there is a good chance the system has collected enough dust and moisture buildup to justify another service.

Do this first

Check the service history first. If nobody remembers the last proper clean, treat the system as overdue.

4-step check before you book

1

Confirm the date

Work out when the last full professional clean actually happened.

2

Do the quick visual check

Look past the filter area for dark dust, marks, or vent buildup.

3

Note usage level

Bedrooms, business sites, and all-day rooms usually need more attention.

4

Book before peak season

Do not wait until the hottest or busiest weeks if the unit is already overdue.

Watch for these signs

- No clear record of the last professional clean
- System runs daily or through long seasons
- Other warning signs are starting to stack up

Best next step

If the unit is overdue and showing any other warning sign, book it in.
